- 1) Suppose Professor Smith asked you to plan a debate on the theme of city traffic. Write him an email to suggest a specific topic with your reasons, and
- 2) tell him about your arrangements.

Dear Professor Smith,

I'm Li Ming, one of your students in college. I'm writing this letter to inform you of my arrangements of the debate, which you asked me to plan last week. The theme is so intriguing that I propose a controversial topic that whether we should limit the number of private cars in the city.

First, the reason I want to hold the topic of debate is the reality that there is a growing number of private cars on the road with the rapid development of the economy. As a consequence, it's getting increasingly jammed in the rush hours. The plan is that the debate will be held at 7:00 P.M. next Saturday, in classroom 7. All the students from the department will be required to attend as the audience.

Thanks for reading.

Sincerely yours,
Liming

As the ironic caricature above revealed, the phenomenon, also known as the Fans Economy, that the online sensation has become a newly-rich overnight cannot be ignored. The money people pay on the internet contributes to the income of those who became famous online.

For those who become famous as online salesmen, this newly-emerged economy turns out to be a beneficial way to sell their commodities with a huge number of fans, who in turn are potential consumers. If regulated properly, e-commerce could be a perfect channel to shorten the distance between buyers and producers. As a result, the price will automatically drop. In this case, online celebrities should be honest and ensure the quality of the goods they sell. The concern of fans should never exist. However, things don't always go as we wish. Some so-called online celebrities have behaved notoriously on the goods they sell. Instead of selling quality goods, they cheated fans with pirated inferiors. It's extremely hard for consumers to distinguish genuine goods from fake ones on the internet.

Personally, I opine that we, the consumers or fans, should be wiser and more careful when we put our trust in online celebrities, who in turn need to be regulated strictly. If the rules of the game were followed, the Fans Economy could be more favourable than ever before.
